

Sun's handling of Java security update prompts conce

Sun Microsystems in the next few days plans to issue an update that plugs a version of its Java Runtime Environment, more than a week after providing a version of the program. The lag has prompted a prominent security research company's security team.